Biographical Note

Julia Weissman (née Zlabovsky) was born in El Paso, Texas, in approximately 1917. As one of six children, she attended college there and then worked as a self-taught commercial artist and copywriter in a department store. After living in San Francisco briefly, Weissman moved to New York, where she regularly attended exhibitions at the American Folk Art Museum. In 1970, she felt quite moved by the exhibition Twentieth-Century Folk Art, curated by Herbert Hemphill, and approached the American Folk Art Museum about writing a book. Hemphill hired her to write the text for the 1972 exhibition The Fabric of the State, and they began their collaboration on Twentieth-Century American Folk Art and Artists soon after that.

Weissman's work experience was diverse. It included art editing, book and magazine editing, freelance writing and editing, working as a nongovernmental organization representative at the United Nations, and teaching American regional and traditional cooking to Japanese women. She also spent time lecturing on American folk art at Hunter College, The New School for Social Research, and New York University.

Julia was married to Norman Weissman. They lived in Plainview, New York, and had two children. In 1991, they moved to Springfield, Virginia, to be closer to their children and grandchildren. Weissman passed away on October 15, 2015 after a brief illness.

Weissman wrote a history of how Twentieth-Century American Folk Art and Artists came to be written and published in her 1998 remembrance of Herbert Hemphill, published in Folk Art. It may be read at: http://issuu.com/american_folk_art_museum/docs/folkart_23_3_fall1998/8

Scope and Contents

The Julia Weissman Papers are related to the publication of Twentieth-Century American Folk Art and Artists (Dutton, 1974), which Weissman coauthored with Herbert Hemphill. The papers include some subject files relating to the publication, such as correspondence with publishers and others involved in the book, drafts of the manuscript, research material, and publicity. This content makes up approximately one linear foot of the collection. The rest of the material is artist files for the artists included in the book, which were created and compiled by Weissman. They include a large amount of photographs of both artists and the artwork, various licensing agreements related to the images for the book, correspondence with the artists and their executors, and publicity materials related to the artists.

Arrangement

Some of the original order was lost when the collection was donated to the American Folk Art Museum. Folder headings are almost identical to Weissman's original ones, although some are edited for clarity. Series 1: Material Related to Twentieth-Century American Folk Art and Artists is filed alphabetically and reflects original order. The following files were originally simply "artist files," which included correspondence, clippings, press materials, and photographic materials. The photography was separated from the artist files because of preservation concerns, but an asterisk (*) is included in the container list for the folders where photography was removed.

Some folders have extensive correspondence with the artists, but most contain articles and newspaper clippings and printed matter related to exhibitions.
